Subject of Review:	The National School Lunch Program (NSLP) is the Nation's second largest food and nutrition assistance program. The program operates in about 100,000 public and nonprofit private schools and provides billions of meals to tens of millions of children and adolescents each year (hereafter “children” or “students” as applicable for brevity). The United States Department of Agriculture’s (USDA) Economic Research Service (ERS) periodically reports on NSLP policies and operations following major changes to the program. The last such report was published in 2008. Since that time, the program has undergone major changes precipitated by the Healthy, Hunger Free Kids Act of 2010 (HHFKA) and the COVID-19 pandemic. This report provides an overview of the NSLP, documents major changes to the program since 2008, and examines historical trends and participant characteristics. It also summarizes relevant research on the financial status of school food authorities (SFAs), program participation, the nutritional quality of school lunches, and the impact of the program on children’s diets. It concludes by discussing longstanding and emergent issues facing the program, as well as research and data needs.
