Subject of Review: Vietnam's export limit may have considerable impacts on the global market, one of which will be an increase in exports among competing exporters. The impact of this export restriction for other major rice exporters will vary and depend on several factors including the level of direct competition between Vietnam and each exporter. Rice is an important food commodity in the United States and rest of the world. The United States is currently the fifth largest rice exporter in the world, but there is little direct competition between the United States and Vietnam for rice exports, so the impacts of Vietnam's export limit on U.S. production and exports may be minimal. However, as the third largest exporter in the world, Vietnam's export limit may result in an increase in the international price, reduction in consumption, and subsequent increase in global food insecurity.

Purpose of Review: The purpose of the review is to ensure the high-quality of the economic analysis, transparent explanation of methods, objective interpretation of results, and effective communication to the intended audience.
